Without conceptual development, many rules in math just don't make sense

For instance, when you add integers, sometimes you add, but sometimes you subtract.

When you subtract integers, you change the sign and add, but sometimes you subtract.

That might be considered just a little confusing

So, it's clearly important to show students where these rules, (shortcuts) come from